Pilates Day

Lincoln Park, South Loop

There are no more excuses to overlook this muscle-toning, flex-training fitness regime: Saturday is National Pilates Day, and Chicago studios are raring to give you a test drive. Bring your own towel (for stretching, not standing) to the Pilates in the Park workout hosted by Helios Center for Movement at Hamlin Park (3035 N. Hoyne Ave.). The free class starts at noon and demos the relaxing towelwork the Roscoe Village center is known for. If you're feeling noncommittal about participating in a workout, ease into things at Posture Perfect Pilates (1247 S. Wabash Ave. 312-675-2981), where, from 10 a.m.-5 p.m., you can meet instructors, get equipment demos and, if you're convinced, sign up for a class. When: Noon Saturday (Helios), 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday (Posture)

WEEKEND PICKS

BY LISA BALDE

CRAWL

Derby Daze Pub Crawl

Lakeview

Just because you can't make it to Churchill Downs doesn't mean the Kentucky Derby needs to be a couch-potato activity. Gussy up with your fave wide-brim/bowler hat and pound derby-themed pavement during this fourth annual bar crawl paying homage to Saturday's big horse race. Start at Mystic Celt (3443 N. Southport Ave. 773-529-8550) and make your way to three other stops. Your $20 ticket gets you drink specials along the way and one raffle entry. Partial proceeds benefit Mercy Home for Boys and Girls.

When: 1-8 p.m. Saturday

EAT

Crawfish Boil

North Center

Do up your Derby Day dinner right with Southern cuisine straight from the source: crawfish flown in from New Orleans to Brownstone Tavern & Grill (3937 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-528-3700). The fourth annual, all-you-can-eat buffet includes cornbread, red beans and rice, and of course, crawfish. Prize giveaways follow each televised race (grand prize is a VIP package to Arlington Park Racetrack), and live music starts after the Derby. We advise skipping breakfast and heading straight over.

When: 11 a.m. Saturday

VIEW

Artropolis

River North

There's much to see during this fourth annual art explosion, encompassing NEXT Art Fair (modern art from galleries and alternative spaces); the International Antiques Fair (100-plus dealers selling books, prints, maps, textiles, art and home decor); and Art Chicago (the fest's main gig featuring contemporary art from around the world), all at the Merchandise Mart (222 Merchandise Mart Plaza. 312-527-3075). Buy a daylong pass and choose your adventure; you're bound to get inspired. We're particularly excited about the programming curated with the Swimming Pool Project Space (2858 W. Montrose Ave.), offering several performance installations, including the Club Nutz mini-nightclub and a pseudo-game show called "Pataphor." $20 for single-day pass. When: 11 a.m.-7 p.m. Saturday, 11 a.m.-6 p.m. Sunday

Put this band on your

Lollapalooza homework list. These Texas up-and-comers, playing Lolla Aug. 6, are exactly the kind of party-starting rock secret you'll want to know about, and lucky for you, they're playing Empty Bottle (1035 N. Western Ave. 773-276-3600) this weekend. $5-$10.

When: 10 p.m. Saturday

DRINK

Cinco de Mayo Street Fest

Bucktown/Wicker
Park, Lakeview

The big day isn't until Wednesday, but Salud Tequila Lounge (1471 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-235-5577) starts the Cinco de Mayo party early with its annual day-long street fest. Dance to live tunes by ska rockers Malafacha (6 p.m.) and veteran headliners Carpachy y Su Super Combo (8 p.m.) while chowing down on barbecue fare and sipping drinks for sale. Your $5 donation benefits Vital Bridges. For more Cinco de Mayo action (with a Derby bonus!), try out new pork-centric spot the Piggery (1625 W. Irving Park Rd. 773-281-7447), celebrating with a free "Mexitucky" buffet, starring Jack Daniel's-sauced meatballs and fried chicken.

When: Noon Saturday (Salud); 3-5 p.m. Saturday (Piggery)

If you could live in any building in Chicago, where would you live?

Ana (@accidentallysexy): Old St. Pat's. How awesome would it be to bring friends back to your bell tower?

Matt (@mattpais): Quartino.

Ryan Justice (@rsjustice): On top of the Willis Tower. I would also have a wardrobe consisting solely of a Batman costume.

What's one thing Facebook doesn't know about you?

Ana: That I'm thin ... the ads keep trying to sell me some sort of fat pill.

Matt: I starred in one episode of "The Mickey Mouse Club" but was fired for having too good of a voice.

Joel Johnson (@silkysoul): That I'm cheatin' on it with Twitter (ssshhh!).

What's going on this weekend?

Ana: I'm moving into the greatest apartment in history. My moving crew consists of me, my dad and my 8-year-old niece.

Matt: Free beer/BBQ/pool party at your place. Everyone's talking about it.

Ian O'Dea (@iaman): The same thing we do every weekend—try to take over the world!

NOTED

Meet the Pancake Stackers (below). IHOP, which announced the limited-time dessert item this week, did not provide nutritional information for Pancake Stackers by themselves. But the company said the regular combo meal—which includes Pancake Stackers with strawberries, two eggs, bacon and hash browns—runs 1,250 calories.

That meal is more than double KFC's Double Down—which sandwiches two pieces of chicken around bacon and weighs in at 540 calories—and at least half the total calories many adults should eat all day.

QUOTED

"It's an opportunity to give our guests another reason to come into IHOP."

—Carolyn O'Keefe, IHOP's senior vice president of marketing

"It's yet again another dietary disaster brought to you by fast food."

—Susan Levin, a dietitian for the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine

A horse is a horse

Maybe it's the excitement over the 136th running of the Kentucky Derby on Saturday, but this week saw more than its fair share of equine news. First, The Associated Press reported the birth of Einstein, believed to be the world's smallest living horse. Mere days later, the AP told us about the existence of Big Jake, believed to be the world's tallest living horse. How do these two trusty steeds stack up? Let's look at the tale of the tape.

Big Jake

The big guy is good with people, likes to goof off and makes appearances to raise money for the Ronald McDonald House, his owner says.

Breeders say unlike the current smallest horse record-holder, Thumbelina, Einstein shows no signs of dwarfism. He's just a tiny horse.

Growth groans in the market

Spurred by an $8,000 federal tax credit that expired at the end of April, Illinois home sales experienced seven consecutive months of year-over-year increases through March, the Illinois Association of Realtors reported. While nobody knows what will happen now that the tax credit has expired, we can look back at how it affected the local market. Check out these Chicago numbers from the first three months of 2010, compared with the same period of 2009. E.J.

↑ 41.6
The percent increase in home sales (single-family and condominiums)—up to 4,241 from 2,995.

↓ $196,000
Median sale price of a home (single-family and condominiums), down from $215,000.

↑ 2,371
The total number of condominium unit transactions, up from 1,576.

↓ $350,959
The average sale price for condos, down from $352,253.

↓ 163
The average number of days on the market before selling for condos, down from 168.

CHICAGOANS SHACKING UP IN STRANGE—BUT COOL—PLACES

By Eric Johnson

FOR REDEYE

For six years, Daniel and Rachel Melcher's home has been a sanctuary.

That's no metaphor—the couple lives in a converted church in Ukrainian Village. As Daniel describes it, their unit is situated “where the congregation sits—the sanctuary.”

The Melchers are enamored with the former Ukrainian church's bell tower and the choir loft in the entryway, as well as their unit's built-in upstairs loft (the ceiling is 40 feet above the ground floor), 4-foot-thick walls, exposed brick and the light pouring in through arched windows.

“I certainly believe in a higher power and the power of certain spaces to bring out that spiritual feeling,” said Daniel, 33, who regretfully is putting the home on the market to make a work-related move to Colorado with Rachel, 31, and their 2-year-old son.

From holy buildings to factories, Chicagoans have adapted some unusual converted spaces into homes as a way to express themselves and break out of a condo mold they deem simple, tired and drab. As the city begins to gear up for open-house season, the market is teeming with real estate rarities that are opulent, functional and even cozy.

“That is the great thing about Chicago's real estate market,” said Tommy Choi, a partner at Weinberg Choi Realty, which is based in Lakeview. “No matter how unique a property is, there is someone out there seeking it.”

Yet more than weirdness or pizzazz, price is the most important factor in home sales, Choi said.

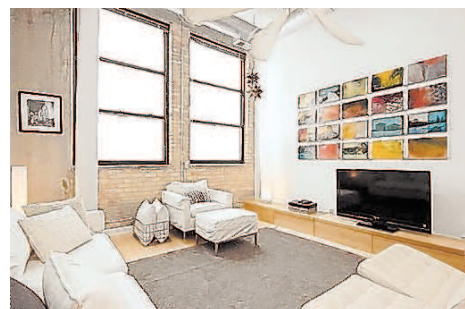

And a hefty federal tax credit helped propel first-time home-buying to the busiest it has been since 1981, according to a recent study by the National Association of Realtors. Though the $8,000 credit expired last month, some real estate experts suggest the market remains in the buyers' favor. According to Moody's, a research firm, the value of buying outweighs renting in Chicago's current real estate market based on analysis that shows whether

ALL OF THESE HOMES ARE NOT LIKE THE OTHERS

Want to know what kinds of unusual spaces are on the Chicago market right now? Here are four that caught our attention—though you might not want to look at the price tags. E.J.

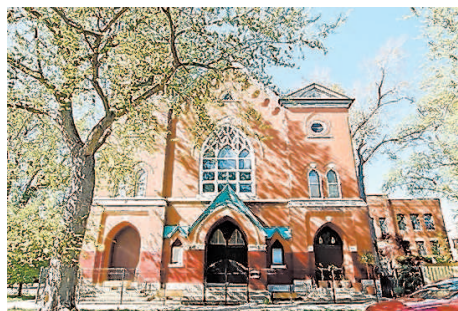

Pencil Factory Lofts in Roscoe Village

1800 W. Roscoe St.

This unit, built in a converted factory building, is intense. Besides having an urban and industrial character—high ceilings, cement columns and exposed brick—the owner built a custom staircase up to a workspace that is lit by an enormous skylight.

Listed price: $399,000 with Keller Williams Realty

Converted church in Ukrainian Village

2558 W. Cortez St.

This 4,000-square-foot former Lutheran church is a single unit. If the dual oak staircases and original stained-glass windows aren't cool enough, it includes a bell tower with full access and even a pulpit and stage. Glory!

Listed price: $800,000 with @properties

House in North Center

3540 N. Ravenswood Ave.

What makes this property so unique—besides its seven-digit price tag and 9,000 square feet—is its North Center opulence: six bedrooms (and six bathrooms) that are all “above grade,” meaning no basement. Rare. Oh, and the full theater, endless swimming pool and basketball court. Calling “MTV Cribs” ...

Listed price: $3.75 million with Koenig & Strey

Loft in River North

208 W. Kinzie St.

With a freight elevator that opens into each unit and its exposed bricks and timber, this place screams East Village NYC. But this place has Chicago roots that date back more than a century.

Listed price: $439,900 with Soul Fire Realty

a buyer will need a big jump in future home value to cover the cost of owning.

So what exactly is out there? Though not all units were on the market, RedEye found groups of people occupying spaces that formerly were a ballroom, warehouse, bakery and gallery.

The owners who spoke to RedEye said they appreciate living in spaces that break the boring, old routine of most Chicago homes.

“I can’t over-emphasize how important it is for me to live in a unique space—especially in a city that can be so cookie-cutter,” Daniel Melcher said.

Other owners aren’t necessarily looking for unusual homes, but when they find them, they are smitten.

When Dina Hill spotted a “For Sale” sign

two years ago in the window of a Lakeview mansion, she found the home wasn’t on the market, but the 700-square-foot, vine-covered coach house at the end of the driveway was.

With a tiny foyer, angled ceiling beams and U-shaped living space with the kitchen on one side and the bathroom on the other, Hill, 47, was sold on the unit she describes as feeling “like a hug.”

Her favorite feature of her rental: the bed situation.

“I love that I have to climb a ladder to get into my bed and when I am in bed it feels a lot like a tree house,” she said. “Plus, you are encouraged to stay healthy and sober when you have to climb a ladder into bed.”

Going off the beaten path of real estate isn’t for everyone, according to broker B.J. Tregoning of Dream Town Real Estate in Lincoln Park. It takes a certain kind of personality and buyer to fit in an unconventional living space, he said.

“Typically those kinds of people are open-minded, creative or risk-taking people and they are looking for something that is out of the norm,” Tregoning said. “Most buyers don’t want to do anything—they want the place to be perfect. They want it to be 100 percent ready for them.”

But there can be a financial or functional upside to being a buyer who is willing to make improvements, as long as the space fulfills basic needs such as a kitchen, bathroom and separate living and bedroom spaces.

“It has to still function like a home regardless of what its previous life was,” Tregoning said. “At the end of the day you need to live in it, regardless of how cool it is.”

That is exactly the mix of form and function that sold artist Ricardo Manuel Diaz, 52, and his wife, Christine Merle, 49, on a converted statue factory that abuts the Eisenhower Expressway.

They were drawn most to the openness of the building—the first floor functions as a gallery and studio; the second story of the loft serves as the living area and has baroque—but also modern—appointments, and a mezzanine space holding two enclosed bedrooms and a master bath.

“Here you can be more imaginative,” Diaz said. “Here you can do as you please.”

Love hurts

By Glenn Gamboa

NEWSDAY

Few artists channel pain as well as Courtney Love.

The suicide of husband Kurt Cobain heightened the emotions of her band Hole's 1994 album "Live Through This," turning it into a grunge-era touchstone. She flew off the rails again with her 2004 solo album, "America's Sweetheart," in the midst of a drug overdose and arrests. Though she's talking that album down now, it includes some of her best work.

With her new album, "Nobody's Daughter," credited to Hole, Love is in the midst of personal struggles again, losing custody of daughter Frances Bean and reeling from alleged embezzlement. That volatility shows, especially in the stellar "Loser Dust" and, to a certain extent, the stomping first single, "Skinny Little Bitch," but there's a new drive to remain in control.

Love never has been a technically great singer, but she certainly knows how to use her voice to communicate her pain. She purrs and yowls through "How Dirty Girls Get Clean," bouncing off the guitar roar with the same abandon she used to body surf. On "Samantha," she taunts and teases before kicking into an expletive-laden rant of a chorus. She begs and pleads on the epic "Letter to God," singing, "I never wanted to be the person you see. Can you tell me who I am?"

It's still clearly a struggle for Love to tap into her fire without going up in flames. "Nobody's Daughter" shows she's going to give it a try.

Freezing

8:30 p.m. Sunday-Tuesday, Sundance

In this biting satire of the entertainment industry, Elizabeth McGovern (lovely to see her again) plays a famous American actress named Elizabeth McGovern who is now living in London with her book editor hubby, Matt (Hugh Bonneville). She wants to jumpstart her stalled career, but her profane, Ari Gold-esque agent Leon (hilarious Tom Hollander) won't give her the time of day. You'll laugh so much you'll have to replay scenes to catch what you missed. Like "Curb Your Enthusiasm," "Freezing" mixes real-life characters with surreal events. It's smart, funny and scathing.

Winner

Jamie Foxx

Jamie Foxx gets help from Justin Timberlake and T.I. on his new single, which plays out like a slowed-down "4 Minutes to Save the World" combined with an NBA playoffs commercial and remixed by Dr. Dre circa "The Chronic." Luckily, "Winner," set for Foxx's upcoming album, was picked as the theme for the NBA Finals on TNT, or the chorus of "I feel like I can't miss ... so just pass me the ball" would have gone without a marketing hook.

Getting the Pretty Back

Molly Ringwald

Molly Ringwald, who forever will be remembered for her iconic roles in "Sixteen Candles," "The Breakfast Club" and "Pretty in Pink," isn't the redheaded, freckled teen she was back then. She's a redheaded, freckled 42-year-old. "Getting the Pretty Back" doesn't present any new insight into Ringwald's on-screen adolescence. It does, however, shed a bunch of light on who she's become off-camera, and that person has a lot of good advice to share. MIKE HOUSEHOLDER, AP

It's Complicated

Available now

Meryl Streep plays Jane, who has three grown kids and owns a very successful bakery in Santa Barbara. She and her ex-husband, Jake (Alec Baldwin), have been apart for 10 years. He since has remarried, but he and Jane seem to have a cordial relationship.

Then one evening, after consuming a few drinks, she and Jake start an affair. And then ... well, it's complicated. There is Jake's young wife and also Adam (Steve Martin), a recently divorced architect who has fallen for Jane. DOUG NYE, MCT

Dead to Rights: Retribution

Xbox 360, PlayStation 3

The original "Dead to Rights" was an adequate if uninspired crime drama that saw middling sales in 2002, but a slapdash 2005 sequel seemed to put the franchise to rest. And yet, here we are in 2010 with a new chapter in a tale that most of us lost interest in a long time ago. The distinguishing feature of "Dead to Rights" is Jack's canine companion, Shadow, but he doesn't do enough to perk up the listless, repetitive violence of "Retribution." LOU KESTEN, AP

Checkmate on Chicago music history

In late '40s Chicago, Leonard Chess (Alessandro Nivola) and his brother Phil (Jon Abrahams) opened a club to make money off the booze people bought while listening to live music. A decade or two later, their record label had spawned influential artists such as Muddy Waters (David Oyelowo).

The buzz: It's been less than two years since "Cadillac Records," starring Adrian Brody, Beyonce and Mos Def, tried to tackle similar material in a film that felt simplistic and easily distracted. Perhaps "Who Do You Love" has the right idea by casting fewer familiar faces and ensuring the characters' fame doesn't compete with the people playing them.

The verdict: The music's what matters, and "Who Do You Love" crackles with the sense of discovering genius that's ready to be heard and distributed. It would take a longer, deeper movie to process the racial context and implications of these events; fortunately the film takes a streamlined approach that feels suitable, if uncomplicated. This isn't a broad biopic about all the artists Chess Records launched. This quick-moving, sassy story merely shows the power of a strong work ethic while documenting an important piece of the puzzle as blues morphed into rock.

Did you know? The Chess brothers learn that if listeners can dance to a song then it will be a hit. Let us know what we can do to make sure that truth never again falls into the wrong hands (Black Eyed Peas).

BoConcept Sofa Bed, $999

Sleeper sofas from A to Zzz's

Situation: Any recommendations for a good sleeper sofa?

Solution: Look for a strong frame and a mattress without metal bar supports.

Buying a sleeper sofa used to mean choosing between a few bulky couches stuffed with complex mechanisms. Metal bars supporting the mattress made for a poor night's sleep, but there wasn't much you could do about it. Now there is some good news: In the past 10 years, sofa beds have advanced, and it's easier to find good-looking, comfortable designs. Here's what to look for.

Size

To make sure you have enough room to easily open the sofa, account for the size of the bed when it's open. Twin sofa beds (also known as chairs-and-a-half) take up about 56 inches by 90 inches when unfolded, a full sleeper measures about 56-by-90 open and a queen averages about 84-by-90 open.

Frame construction

Two main components affect the quality of a sleeper sofa: the frame and the mattress. A kiln-dried hardwood frame with mitered joints is one of the strongest options. The kiln drying stabilizes the frame by extracting moisture from the wood so it doesn't warp or crack. Strong metal frames are used more frequently in modern designs. Just make sure the frame doesn't include a bar that passes under the middle of the mattress—that's usually a sign of an uncomfortable sleeper sofa.

Mattresses and cushions

Foam mattresses are becoming more common in sleeper sofas. In a hinged design, the sofa back folds down to create a full or queen surface, so there's actually no mattress at all, just the foam couch cushions. If you're interested in a hinged design, try it with a mattress topper. It provides a layer of protection over the sofa while you're sleeping and makes the surface a little more comfortable.

Nothing beats a store test drive for determining how comfortable a mattress really is. You should be able to lie flat without rolling toward the edges or center of the mattress, and you shouldn't feel any springs or bars.

Price

Quality sofa beds can range anywhere from $1,000 to $5,000. On the mid- to high end,

I like the level of quality at Design Within Reach (dwr.com), Room and Board (roomandboard.com) and Crate and Barrel (crateandbarrel.com). For a budget sleeper sofa, try CB2 (cb2.com) and BoConcept (boconcept.com), both of which have sofas under or around the $1,000 mark. All of these stores have locations in Chicago where you can try sitting and lying down on the sofa bed before you buy.

Tips for your rentertainment

Associated Press

The vacation rental market—booking a vacation property directly from the owner or from a property management company—is booming. When HomeAway ran a Super Bowl ad this year featuring Chevy Chase and Beverly D'Angelo in a reprise of their roles as the Griswolds from the 1983 hit comedy "National Lampoon Vacation," it marked a sort of coming-of-age for the industry.

As with any new thing, consumers need to be cautious. Web photos can be deceiving. Online reviews can be planted by people with an agenda, good or bad. What can a would-be renter do? Here are a few tips from the Better Business Bureau, travel experts and seasoned renters to make sure you don't get burned when you rent a home for your vacation.

RENTING GUIDELINES

» Get a written agreement spelling out terms and conditions. Never wire money or write a personal check. Plastic is the way to go because your credit card company may offer some protection.

» Ask friends for recommendations. If you decide on a house or condo belonging to a stranger, ask for references from others who have stayed there.

» If a deal sounds too good to be true, it probably is. In most cases, you get what you pay for.

» Don't trust an owner who will communicate only via e-mail, and don't hesitate to pick up the phone to ask the owner/property manager detailed questions or even request more photos than those displayed in the online ad.

» If a property doesn't live up to its billing, document problems with pictures or videos. Complain immediately to the owner or property manager.

» Plug the property owner and address into a Web browser and see what comes up. You may discover complaints from previous renters. Be skeptical of glowing online reviews, especially if the reviewers are anonymous.

» Seasoned renters suggest negotiating with owners/managers on price if vacancy rates in the area are high. You also can inquire about perks to sweeten the deal, such as free tickets or discounts to local activities.

Get in the flow of Cinco de Mayo with big-batch recipes

By Rich Goldsmith

FOR REDEYE

Second only to St. Patrick's Day, Cinco de Mayo is a perfect excuse to drink the afternoon away with a group of like-minded amigos. And making sure you're well-stocked for a day of sipping margaritas on the porch takes pitchers full of cocktails.

Mixing up these pitchers is slightly more complicated than one might think. It's not as simple as just tripling a margarita recipe and tossing it in a convenient piece of Tupperware. Here are a few tips for mixing cocktail pitchers.

- » Generally assume each person you're serving will throw back the rough equivalent of 6 ounces of liquor. Some will drink more, some will drink less, but it'll all even out in the end.
- » Know how much your pitcher holds. Undermixing and overmixing are rookie mistakes.
- » Mix your drinks by ratios, not ounces. It's the easiest way to make large batches like these.
- » If you add ice to the pitcher, you'll need to mix stronger cocktails than usual because the ice will melt while the pitcher sits in the sun, diluting the cocktails. A better approach is to mix the pitcher and add ice to glasses as you pour.
- » Carbonated drinks don't work particularly well in pitchers unless you're going to drink them fast. They go flat in a hurry.

Remember, your friends are lushes, so have more than one pitcher on hand. Here are a few big-batch recipes to help get you started.

Classic margarita

This is the first and most important cocktail to master for the occasion. It's the most popular tequila drink in the country and the one everyone expects when they show up to celebrate Cinco de Mayo.

INGREDIENTS

- » 3 parts tequila (use a good silver or reposado tequila—Tres Generaciones and Don Julio are solid picks)
- » 2 parts Triple sec
- » 1 part fresh lime juice
- » Add simple syrup (equal parts ultrafine sugar and water) to taste

DIRECTIONS

- » Mix all ingredients in a pitcher and fill glasses with crushed ice.
- » For blended margaritas, pour the mixture in batches into a blender and add ice to just below the top of the liquid. Keep in mind that the ice will melt, so the margaritas need to be stronger.

TRIBUNE FILE

Red tea

Man can't live on margaritas alone, and drinks with tea are hot this season. The tannins in iced tea mix perfectly with bourbon flavors and fruit, making for a dangerously drinkable cocktail.

INGREDIENTS

- » 1 ½ parts Red Stag
- » ½ part Canton ginger liqueur (or triple sec, if Canton is too rich for your blood)
- » ½ part fresh lemon sour*
- » 3 parts iced tea (Pom Wonderful adds some nice astringency, but use your favorite)

- » Pour all the ingredients together and mix in the pitcher. Fill tall glasses full of ice and enjoy.

You can use bottled sour mix, but fresh lemon sour is far better and easy to make. Just use the simple syrup directions from the margarita recipe and add an equal measure of lemon juice.*

Singapore sling

Maybe you want to protest the homogenization of Mexican culture. Maybe you just don't like tequila. Either way, the Singapore sling is an awesome pitcher drink for a crowd.

INGREDIENTS

- » 1 part gin
- » ½ part cherry brandy (Kirschwasser is a reliable standby in this case)
- » 4 parts pineapple juice
- » ½ part lime juice
- » ¼ part orange liqueur (Cointreau is used in the original recipe)
- » ¼ part Benedictine
- » ⅓ part grenadine
- » A few dashes Angostura Bitters to taste

DIRECTIONS

- » Mix all the ingredients in order in a large pitcher and, if you like, toss in cubed pineapple and maraschino or brandied cherries to make it look nice.
- » Pour over ice in tall glasses and toast to the Mexican army that provided an excuse to drink cocktails from the Far East.

Judge: Blago defense can't subpoena Obama

Chicago Tribune

The judge overseeing the corruption case against former Gov. Rod Blagojevich has denied a defense motion to issue a subpoena for the testimony of President Obama.

U.S. District Judge James Zagel said he does not believe Obama's testimony would be material to the charges.

Zagel said the defense motion fell "very short" of demonstrating a need to subpoena the president.

The defense had said it wanted to

Blagojevich

question the president about

Blagojevich's alleged attempt to sell the U.S. Senate seat left vacant when Obama was elected.

Blagojevich allegedly met with a union official about getting something from the Obama administration in exchange for nominating Obama friend Valerie Jarrett to the seat. The defense seemed to want to explore whether the official was actually representing the Obama camp, which the judge said is immaterial.

"The only material aspect is what the defendant believed," Zagel said, not what the official's role was in reality.

Zagel said the issue could be revisited later in the trial.

After the hearing, defense lawyer Sheldon Sorosky noted Zagel did not fully shut the door on the subpoena.

"The judge did say that he still might allow the president to testify later on should it become necessary," Sorosky said.

Obama could be needed to dispute allegations raised by fundraiser Antoin "Tony" Rezko, who may be a witness in the case, Sorosky said.

The White House is going to "continue not to comment," deputy press secretary Bill Burton said.

Oil makes landfall

Associated Press

MOUTH OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER Heavy winds and high tides complicated efforts to hold back oil that threatened to coat birds and other marine life as it oozed ashore from the Gulf of Mexico on Friday. The White House responded to the massive spill by halting any new offshore oil projects until safeguards are in place to prevent rig explosions like the one that caused it.

The National Weather Service predicted winds, high tides and waves through Sunday that could push oil deep into the inlets, ponds and lakes of southeastern Louisiana. Seas of 6 to 7 feet were pushing tides several feet above normal toward the coast, compounded by thunderstorms expected in the area. The wind was pushing oily water over the booms meant to contain it.

More than 200,000 gallons of oil a day are spewing from the blown-out well at the site of the Deepwater Horizon, which exploded April 20 and sank two days later. Crews are

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

The Coast Guard defended the federal response so far. Asked on all three network TV morning shows Friday whether the government has done enough to push oil company BP PLC to plug the underwater leak and protect the coast, Coast Guard Rear Adm. Sally Brice-O'Hara said the response led by her agency has been rapid, sustained and has adapted as the threat grew.

using at least six remotely operated vehicles to try to shut off an underwater valve, but so far they've been unsuccessful.

They also are drilling a relief well to decrease the pressure and slow the leak, though that could take up to three months.

Meanwhile, concern grew about animals and plants on the ecologically fragile coastline. A rescue operation at Fort Jackson, about 70 miles southeast of New Orleans, had its first patient Friday, a young northern gannett found offshore. The bird is normally white with a yellow head and long, pointed beak but was covered in thick, black oil. Workers with Delaware-based Tri-State Bird Rescue and Research use Dawn blue dishwashing soap to scrub any oil-tainted animals.

Down the coast, at the Institute for Marine Mammal Studies in Gulfport, Miss., scientists, veterinarians and researchers frantically prepared for the possible arrival of hundreds of oily sea mammals in the coming days.

The nonprofit facility's director, Dr. Moby Solangi, said Friday the site will be ground zero for injured marine mammals from Texas to Florida.

Pools are cleaned and prepared to handle sea turtles, manatees and dolphins. There are as many as 5,000 dolphins in the Gulf area between the Mississippi and Louisiana coasts and the oil rig, many giving birth right now.

"It's very bad timing," Solangi said. "We're going to have a lot of babies here. We're looking at a colossal tragedy."

Video game upgrades

By Ryan Smith

FOR REDEYE

It's cool that EA recently announced New Orleans Saints quarterback Drew Brees will be the cover boy for this year's "Madden," but why aren't pro athletes a little more involved in the video games they're promoting? Danica Patrick stepped up by providing voice work for the racing video game "Blur," due out later this month, but what about the rest? RedEye made a list of a few other current sports games that could have made better use of the cover athletes with our suggested special features. RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR

Patrick Kane
"NHL 10"

Suggested feature: Grow-a-Mullet function
The facial hair-challenged Blackhawks star grew a wondrous blond mullet for the Nashville series, and it would have been fun to let the rest of the league be all business in front, party in the back. The Grow-a-Mullet function would grant users the power to instantly place the funky hairstyle on players with potentially disastrous results (think Brian Campbell with a curly red mullet).

Kobe Bryant
"NBA 2K10"

Suggested feature: Kobe Artificial Intelligence
Had the Kobester sat down with 2K Sports programmers, they could have built a virtual Bryant with a more realistic personality. When playing for the Lakers, cyber-Kobe might take 40 shots a game, wear a deep frown on his face or randomly scream at teammates for not passing to him.

Tiger Woods
"Tiger Woods PGA Tour Online"

Suggested feature: Your Wallet in the Rough
This browser-based online game asks you to pay real money to upgrade your clubs to help you play more like Tiger on the golf course. To really simulate the life of Tiger, EA should have charged players cash for his off-the-course exploits as well. Lose corporate endorsements? Pay $10. Hire a small army of PR reps and divorce lawyers? Pony up a 10-spot.

'Born Free' by M.I.A.

America's most shocking videos

M.I.A.'s controversial vid is reminiscent of some classics

Who says music videos aren't relevant anymore? MTV might be so over playing vids—remember, it dropped the "music television" part of its official logo last winter—but that hasn't squelched the artistic expression of many modern-day acts. And some videos still can be flat-out crazy.

This week, M.I.A. released a music video so outrageous that YouTube pulled it from its site. The video in question, for the song "Born Free," plays like a nine-minute short film in which a fleet of soldier-types rounds up and executes a bunch of redheads.

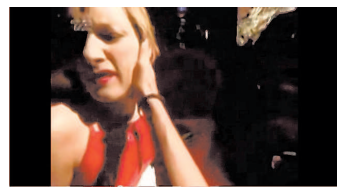

Obviously M.I.A., she of the eyebrow-raising performance at the 2009 Grammys when she was nine months pregnant, likes to rock the boat. But she's not exactly original. She's probably taking some cues from these guys, her controversial music video-making predecessors. ARIEL ALEXOVICH, REDEYE

'Like a Prayer'
Madonna
1989

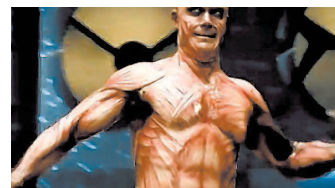

Burning crosses + stigmata + grinding with a dude who looks like a black Jesus = one P.O.'d Vatican. She'd follow this up in 1992 with "Erotica," so dominatrixy even MTV banned it for a time.

'Jeremy'
Pearl Jam
1992

Yes, the song is about the true story of a high-schooler who shot himself in the mouth in front of his class. Tragic. We don't need to see the re-enactment in video form.

'Smack My Bitch Up'
Prodigy
1997

Snorting cocaine, drinking excessively, decking a few people in the face ... sounds like another day in the RedEye office to us. Kidding! It's not hard to see why this video was banished to late-night rotations.

'Rock DJ'
Robbie Williams
2000

Hope you weren't eating when you saw this the first time. Premise: Robbie tears off his flesh, tendons and bloody organs, flinging them around a room for hot ladies to eat. Yummy.

'Window Seat'
Erykah Badu
2010

Miss Badu probably thought she had the "Craziest Video of 2010" title all sewn up when she released this pseudo-JFK-assassination re-enactment in March. Bonus cuckoo points for Badu for strolling Dallas in the buff.

Lance adds to team

Lance Armstrong (above) is expecting his fifth child, the second with girlfriend Anna Hansen, the cyclist tweeted Thursday. The seven-time Tour de France winner is so excited, he even created a Twitter account for his future kid: @cincoarmstrong. The fetus' debut tweet: "I got 2 arms, 2 legs, a nickname, and i'm 2 inches long. See y'all in October."

Eminem's do-over

Eminem (above) not only ditched his "Relapse 2" album title, he also dumped the music, saying the songs he recorded for the record went "pretty much right in the trash." "I kind of went back to the lab on that whole concept as I started working with different producers," he said on his satellite radio channel Thursday, according to the Detroit Free Press. "The overall sound and everything changed, and I kind of turned the corner." The new record, "Recovery," is due out June 22.

Kim Kardashian took to her blog Thursday to address a serious accusation: that she stunk up a plane by bringing a burrito onboard, as reported by the National Enquirer.

"First of all, I absolutely hate burritos!" she posted. "Secondly, I have never brought Mexican food on a plane. This never happened and these quotes made me laugh so much ... This is just hysterical!"

We're glad she, uh, cleared the air on this mystery.
